Arkansas' Eclectic Celebration of the Cinema Arts

The Ozark Foothills FilmFest takes place each year as spring touches the rolling, chartreuse hills of rural north central Arkansas and the vibrant, urban landscape of Little Rock. Held for two consecutive weekends in late March/early April, the festival screens all film genres, seeking out especially works by Arkansas' independent filmmakers and cinematic explorations of rural America. Surrounding the screenings are guest filmmaker Q&As, panel discussions, social gatherings, and live music performances.

Encouraging, Facilitating and Showcasing the Work of Young Filmmakers

The T Tauri Film Festival and Movie Camp is a summer digital movie event for kids and teens. The multi-faceted event includes a national young filmmaker competition judged by peer jurors over a two-month period, public screenings of movies by youth filmmakers from across the country and workshops in Digital Video Basics, Documentary Filmmaking and Acting on Camera. Workshop tuition is kept well below the regional average and a large number of students attend on scholarships provided by foundations, businesses and individuals.
